

Balique Restaurant, Jimbaran

I have long been a fan of interior designer Zohra's work, which has appeared all over Bali and Jakarta in villas, spas, private residences, boutiques and restaurants. As a Bali long-term resident, it is with happiness to report that she and her husband Blaise have now opened Balique, a perfect stop off in the Jimbaran Village when on the way down from the aforementioned Bukit. This traditional seaside village and Balique suit each other harmoniously, as Balique pays homage to all the best of the Indonesian archipelago under its whirring fan-open style roof, in both the style and cuisine stakes. If you appreciate an authentic step into the past in stunning surroundings teemed with objets d'art, as well as a delicious menu, fabulous cocktails as well as an extensive affordable wine list - then you have arrived. And for sure, the warm décor along with the charming team of staff will make sure you completely feel at home here - welcome to the amazing world that is Balique and allow yourself to forget the fast, modern world outside, and be at peace in a bygone era of pure sensuality. Balique endeavours to provide the freshest ingredients, organic when possible, and locally sourced from the cool farms of the Bedugul highlands of northern Bali. There are some imported meats and ingredients also, which have been delicately sourced to maintain a sustainable thoughtfulness. Balquise Living boutique, adjoining Balique has many of what makes this charming restaurant so unique, now thoughtfully on offer to guests. Beautiful antiques as well as whimsical objets d'art are waiting for new homes for those with a little imagination. There is also Zohra's personally designed jewellery collection, Shan-Shan, ready to light a sparkle to anyone's day - in an array of twinkling designs of necklaces, earrings, bracelets and rings - bold, bright and beautiful!
